HAUNTED CHANGI follows a local film crew as they explore the famously haunted "Old Changi Hospital" in Singapore.

HAUNTED CHANGI is an interactive movie experience in that the film's followers were able to communicate with the crew member/characters as the production began unfolding online January of 2010. The online experience consists of many separate websites, most of which can be reached from the official website -- hauntedchangi.com. These online portals include crew blogs, personal blogs, photos from the production, crew member Facebook accounts (which also included many correspondence between all of the characters and followers), a Facebook group page and a massive Facebook fan page -- all of which blossomed as production of HAUNTED CHANGI continued from it's humble first announcement as an independent film production to it's theatrical release in Singapore on September of 2010. The "experience" still continues today as fans who've seen the film continue to log onto the public Facebook page with probing questions and comments. As one of the crew members says in the film -- "it's better to be superstitious than sorry."
